

Desire for innovation

Since I was little, I've always found myself immersed in communication and creation of all kinds. When asked to write a simple text, I would present a sheet full of different and personalized characters, specifically chosen to visually describe each word.

As the years went by, I discovered a passion for design that became my art.

I always want to give more and break away from the norms, creating something unique for every project. Design has become more than just a passion for me; it's a reason worth living for.
